(WHITEFIELD, NH) - Today, Great North Wood Wireless, LLC (GNWW) announced that it will bring high-speed 4G LTE cellular services to Northern New Hampshire beginning in Coos County and then to additional counties in New Hampshire. Soon, national operators such as Sprints' customers will have coverage in Northern New Hampshire.

"I am very pleased Great North Wood Wireless is working to ensure that un-served and underserved broadband and cellular subscribers in Northern New Hampshire will have access to the latest broadband cellular service. Additionally, now cellular customers that live and travel in our coverage areas will have access to a robust 4G LTE network," said Robert J. Parsloe, President & CEO of Great North Wood Wireless. "Meeting the broadband and cellular needs of un-served and underserved markets remain our primary focus, and this new 4G LTE network in Coos County will give residents and visitors in rural New Hampshire the same high-speed services and cellular experience as those in urban areas. In addition, "we also will be able to provide our 4G broadband services directly through our in-market partner, TCC Networks/Skywire."

At an announcement this morning Senator Jeanne Shaheen (D-New Hampshire) said, “The expansion of cell and broadband service in the North Country is great news for jobs, the economy and public safety in northern New Hampshire. I look forward to continuing to support the efforts of Great North Woods Wireless and all those involved in this project to increase access to telecommunications services for North Country residents.”

Director of Broadband Technology for the state of New Hampshire Carol Miller said, “Coos County and the State of New Hampshire is grateful for the resources and commitment of Great North Woods Wireless to bring 4G LTE voice and data to an area that needs enhanced network investment. This Public/Private partnership shows us how collaboration, and creativity can play a real role in getting things done for rural areas. For our northern community economic development strategies it means that opportunity for residents, visitors, and public safety will be greatly enhanced while creating a few direct jobs and supporting many indirect jobs.”

Bob DeAngelis, Executive Director of Coos Economic Development Corporation also praised GNWW, "Coos Economic Development Corporation (CEDC) could not be more pleased with the spirit of cooperation being exhibited by Bob Parsloe and the Great North Woods Wireless team. The residents, businesses and visitors to the northern portion of the State of NH, along with emergency first responders, are fortunate that we have such a committed partner in GNWW to bringing much needed 4G/LTE to previously unserved or underserved areas of our state."
